Commencement

May 11 and 12, 2001

The commencement ceremony is an important occasion not only for you but for other graduates, families, and friends. Although it is a happy time, it should not be a time of revelry. Your conduct at the ceremony should be dignified. Alcoholic beverages may not be brought into either the SIU Arena or Shryock Auditorium either by degree candidates or guests. Security personnel will be on hand to deal with alcohol or other distracting objects.

Professional photographers will be taking two photographs of each graduate as he or she crosses the stage. Each graduate will receive a proof print of each of those shots at no charge, and will have the opportunity to purchase additional copies or various photograph packages at a reasonable cost.

Southern Illinois University Carbondale

When its doors were first opened in 1874, Southern Illinois University Carbondale was a place where teachers and scholars believed that their graduates should be prepared to make useful contributions to the health and strength of society. This is still our intention. Outstanding departments, dedicated faculty, thorough and often inspired instruction, and a thoughtful blending of old wisdom with new knowledge have become the hallmarks of the University.

Because this is true, we can point with pride to our alumni, many of whom are distinguished scholars, business leaders, artists, and public servants, and many more of whom are essential to organizations and communities throughout the nation.

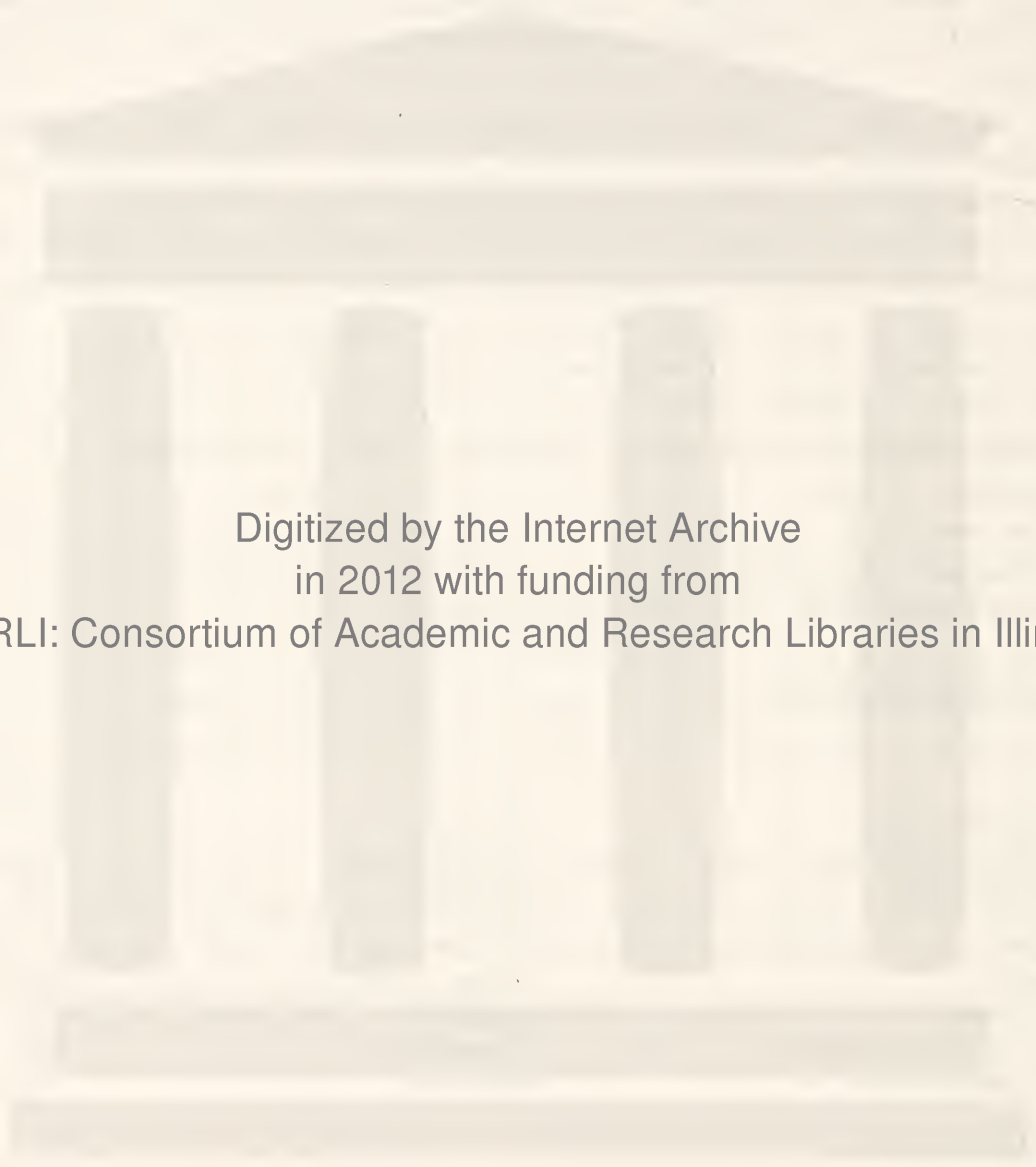

Knowing that classroom learning is only one facet of education, we help students learn to play through intramural sports, training in crafts, outdoor activities for individuals and groups, a variety of musical organizations; learn to help themselves through wellness education, physical fitness training, and counseling; learn to help others through fraternal, community service, political, and volunteer groups; learn to see and know their surroundings through hands-on projects, field trips, lectures, and excursions of their own. In encouraging students to explore the avenues and byways of knowledge and experience, our aim is to expand their view of the world in such a way that, while they focus on the particulars of their careers, they will be able to see their lives and their work in the broad context of the communities and the world.

Distinguished Service Award

Paul Simon

Paul Simon was born November 29, 1928, in Eugene, Oregon. He attended the University of Oregon and Dana College in Blair, Nebraska. At the age of 19, Simon became the nation's youngest editor-publisher when he accepted a local Lion's Club challenge to save the Troy Tribune in Troy, Illinois, near St. Louis. He built a chain of 13 newspapers in southern and central Illinois, which he sold in 1966 to devote full-time to public service and writing.

Simon served two years, 1951–53, in the U.S. Army and was assigned to the Counter-Intelligence Corps as a special agent along the Iron Curtain in Europe.

He was elected to the Illinois House in 1954 and to the Illinois Senate in 1962. During his 14 years in the legislature, he won the Independent Voters of Illinois' "Best Legislator Award" every session. He was chief sponsor of the state's Open Meetings Law and of legislation creating the Illinois Arts Council, and he played a leading role in chartering the state's community college system.

Simon was elected lieutenant governor in 1968 and was the first in the state's history to be elected to that post with a governor of another party. In that office he became the people's ombudsman and is widely credited with turning what had been a ceremonial position into one focused on making government better serve its citizens.

After narrowly losing the 1972 Democratic gubernatorial primary to Dan Walker, Simon started the public affairs reporting program at Sangamon State University in Springfield, Illinois (now the University of Illinois at Springfield), and lectured during the 1972–73 school year at the John F. Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University.

Simon was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives in 1974 and served Illinois' 22nd and 24th Congressional Districts for 10 years. During his service in the House, Simon played a leading role in drafting and enacting major legislation in a wide range of issue areas including education, disability policy and foreign affairs. He was chief sponsor of the Missing Children Act and of subsequent legislation that established the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children. He helped win passage of the bill that created both the Illinois-Michigan Canal National Heritage Corridor and the extension to Illinois of the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial, the national park associated with St. Louis' Gateway Arch. He was the chief House advocate for the nation's so-called "atomic veterans" and their families. Always known as an effective legislator, Simon, according to Time magazine, passed more amendments in 1983 than any other member of the House of Representatives. While in the House, he worked closely with former Speaker Newt Gingrich in establishing the office of house historian.

In 1984, Simon upset three-term incumbent Charles Percy to win election to the U.S. Senate. In 1987–88, he sought the Democratic nomination for president. He won re-election to the U.S. Senate in 1990. Enacted education and job training laws Simon wrote include the National Literacy Act, the School-To-Work Opportunities Act, the Job Training Partnership Act amendments, several provisions of the Goals 2000 Act and the 1994 reauthorization of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act. He was the leading Senate champion of the new direct college loan program. He was chief Democratic sponsor of the balanced budget amendment. The drive he spearheaded to curb television violence led to the first joint standards on violence by the broadcast networks, the Parental Advisory System and the new independent monitoring programs launched by the broadcast and cable networks in 1994. Legislation he initiated led to the designation of the first five federally chartered future, high-speed rail corridors, including the St. Louis-Chicago-Detroit/Milwaukee corridor.

During his years as a public official, Paul Simon was known for exceptional constituent service. His office handled more cases each year than almost any other Senate office. He also was the Senate's pacesetter in convening town meetings. As a senator, Simon held more than 600 town meetings throughout the state, more than any U.S. senator from Illinois in the state's history.

In November 1994, as Illinois' leading statewide Democratic officeholder and with the strongest political standing of his public service career, Paul Simon announced that he would retire from the Senate when his term expired January 3, 1997.

Simon holds 52 honorary degrees and has written 19 books. He is currently a professor at Southern Illinois University, where he teaches classes in political science, history and journalism. Simon is also founder and director of the Public Policy Institute at the Carbondale campus. His service contributions are widespread and beneficiaries include academic departments, colleges, SIU, southern Illinois, the state, the nation, and the world.

Senator Simon's most recent contributions to American society come through the action the Public Policy Institute has taken on major policy issues. The Institute's recommendations on addressing the proliferation of prison building in America without compromising public safety stirred interest in several states and at the national level. The Institute also convened religious leaders from throughout the nation, including Pat Robertson and the heads of the Unitarian-Universalist Congregations, to develop recommendations on how the religious community and individual churches could address poverty in America. Those recommendations have kindled interest throughout the nation and in the White House itself. The Institute has also focused on international issues such as the recent genocide in Rwanda and the evolving relationship between China and Taiwan. The Institute has gained a reputation for addressing tough issues and spurring action and is a direct link to a better future for the average American.

In recognition of his outstanding achievements, service, and dedication, Southern Illinois University Carbondale finds it fitting and proper to present the Distinguished Service Award to Paul Simon.

Honorary Degree

Doctor of Humane Letters

Oscar Arias

Oscar Arias, former President of Costa Rica and 1987 Nobel Peace Laureate, holds international stature as a spokesperson for the Third World. Championing such issues as human development, democracy, and demilitarization, he has traveled the globe spreading a message of peace and applying the lessons garnered from the Central American Peace Process to topics of current global debate. The New York Times reported that Oscar Arias' "...positions on Central American issues have become the standards by which many people in Congress and elsewhere have come to judge United States policy." In a similar way, he has come to take a leading position in international discourse.

Dr. Arias was born in Heredia, Costa Rica in 1940. He studied Law and Economics at the University of Costa Rica. His thesis, Grupos de Presión en Costa Rica (Pressure Groups in Costa Rica) earned him the 1971 National Essay Prize. In 1974, he received a doctoral degree in Political Science at the University of Essex, England. After serving as Professor of Political Science at the University of Costa Rica, Dr. Arias was appointed Costa Rican Minister of Planning and Economic Policy. He won a seat in Congress in 1978 and was elected secretary-general of the National Liberation Party in 1981. In 1986, Oscar Arias was elected president of Costa Rica.

Dr. Arias assumed office at a time of great regional discord. Despite the previous presidential administration's decision not to become embroiled in the growing conflict, Costa Rica's involvement seemed almost unavoidable. In the face of these threats, Arias intensified his efforts to promote peace. Before assuming the presidency, he traveled throughout Central and South America to personally invite the Latin American heads of state to visit Costa Rica for his presidential inauguration. On the day Arias took office, the presidents of nine Latin American countries met in San José. In this meeting Arias called for a continental alliance for the defense of democracy and liberty. He affirmed that all Central Americans were entitled to the same liberties and social and economic guarantees of democracy, that each nation had the right to select, through free and fair elections, the type of government that could best meet the needs and interests of its people, and that neither armies nor totalitarian regimes were entitled to make this decision. At that moment Costa Rica, led by Oscar Arias, assumed an active role in the search for democracy and peace for the countries of the region.

In 1987, President Arias drafted a peace plan to end the regional crisis. Widely recognized as the Arias Peace Plan, his initiative culminated in the signing of the Esquipulas II Accords, or the Procedure to Establish a Firm and Lasting Peace in Central America, by all the Central American presidents on August 7, 1987. In that same year he was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize.

In 1988, Arias used the monetary award from the Nobel Peace Prize to establish the Arias Foundation for Peace and Human Progress. Under the auspices of the Foundation, three programs were established: The Center for Human Progress to promote equal opportunities for women and gender equality; the Center for Organized Participation to strengthen the participation and action of civil society in Central America; and the Center for Peace and Reconciliation to work for demilitarization and conflict resolution in the developing world. From these headquarters, Dr. Arias has continued his pursuit of global peace and human security.

Dr. Arias has received honorary doctorates from universities such as Harvard, Washington, Illinois, Oviedo, Franklin and Marshall, and Southern Connecticut; the colleges of Dartmouth, Ithaca, and Quinnipiac; and several other prestigious educational institutions. He has also received numerous prizes, among them the Jackson Ralston Prize, the Prince of Asturias Award, the Martin Luther King Jr. Peace Award, the Albert Schweitzer Humanitarian Award, the Liberty Medal of Philadelphia, and the Americas Award.

Oscar Arias participates actively in several international organizations. He is the president of the International Press Service (IPS), and serves on the Board of Directors of the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute (SIPRI), the International Center for Human Rights and Democratic Development (ICHRDD), and the Institute for International Studies at Stanford University. Dr. Arias also serves on the Board for the Inter Action Council, the International Negotiation Network of the Carter Center, and Transparency International. In addition, he is an active member of the Commission on Global Governance, the Inter-American Dialogue, and the Society for International Development.

While Oscar Arias is best known for his international efforts, he was also lauded for his very capable management of the Costa Rican economy during his presidential term. Under his leadership, Costa Rica's economy thrived and served as a model for neighboring countries. The superior economic growth was balanced by a strong social welfare program which included, among other projects, an initiative to provide housing to the poor.

Since the conclusion of his term of office in 1990, Dr. Arias has continued to be "a man of the people" promoting such innovative ideas as human security, human development, and global governance. By bringing human concerns to the forefront of the international agenda, he provides a crucial link between the impoverished South and the developed North, between the more politically stable West and a conflict-ridden East. To the people of industrialized countries, he carries a sincere message of solidarity and partnership, in order to initiate a new era of peace and prosperity for all human kind.

An unequivocal example of this solidarity is shown in Dr. Arias' commitment to curtail the global arms trade. On May 29, he met with seven other Nobel Peace laureates to publicly unveil an International Code of Conduct on Arms Transfers. Dr. Arias' proposal stipulates that any country wishing to purchase arms must meet certain criteria, including the promotion of democracy, the protection of human rights, and transparency in military spending. It would also prohibit arms sales to nations that support terrorism and to states that are engaged in aggression against other nations or peoples. Current initiatives to restrict arms sales in the United States and the European Union represent a first step toward Dr. Arias' mission for peace.

In addition to the Code, Dr. Arias encourages preventive diplomacy to avert regional arms races and conflict. He strongly advocates the Year 2000 Campaign to Redirect World Military Spending to Human Development, which calls upon the United Nations to send special envoys to different sites of potential international conflict. Furthermore, Dr. Arias recently proposed to all Heads of State in the hemisphere that they endorse a two-year moratorium on the purchase of high-tech weapons. To date, 24 leaders have agreed to this moratorium. This measure would further increase peace and human development in Latin America – already the world's first nuclear-free zone.

In recognition of his contributions, outstanding achievements, service, and distinguished leadership record, Southern Illinois University Carbondale finds it fitting and proper to present the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters to Oscar Arias.

Academic Regalia

The academic regalia, consisting of cap, gown, and hood, originated about the twelfth century and was worn primarily for warmth. Later, the material of the gown and lining and shape of the hood represented the economic and social as well as the academic status of the wearer.

In 1895, a commission of American educators established an inter-collegiate code for the academic regalia. This code, revised in 1932, 1969 and again in 1989, provides a comprehensive system of academic regalia for American colleges and universities. While the code specifies black gowns, foreign universities and a growing number of American universities have gowns of various colors.

There are four types of gowns and hoods—the associate's, bachelor's, master's, and doctor's. The associate and bachelor's gowns are the same except for a slight difference in color, untrimmed and have a closed front and long pointed sleeves. Women may wear a white collar with the bachelor's gown when no hood is worn. The master's gown is untrimmed, may be worn open or closed, and has extremely long, closed sleeves with an opening at the wrist. The ends of the sleeves are square with an arc extending from the wrist opening to the square end. The doctor's gown may be worn open or closed and has round, bell-shaped sleeves. There are wide velvet borders down the front and three velvet bars on each sleeve; the borders and bars may be black or the color of the discipline of the degree.

The hood for each degree has a distinctive form. The master's hood is three and one-half feet in length with wider velvet edging and more of the lining exposed. The doctor's hood is four feet in length with the widest velvet edging and full exposure of the lining. Hoods are lined with the color(s) of the college or university conferring the degree. The color of the velvet edging identifies the discipline of the degree.

The black mortarboard cap is standard in the United States, although soft tams are worn at some universities. Tassels are usually black, except when no hood is worn, in which case the color of the tassel represents the field of study. Doctor's caps may have gold tassels. Upon conferral of the degree the tassel is worn on the left of the cap. Caps are considered part of the academic regalia and are customarily removed only during prayer, oath, or pledge, and then by men only.

Colors of Tassels and Hoods

In the United States the hood is edged with the color of the field of study and lined with the colors of the university conferring the degree. Southern Illinois University Carbondale's hoods are lined in maroon with a white chevron. Tassel and/or velvet hood colors, representing the fields of study, worn by students and faculty in the academic procession are:

The nervous system is the body's communication system. It consists of the brain, spinal cord, and peripheral nerves. The brain is the central control center, and the spinal cord is the main pathway for information between the brain and the rest of the body. Peripheral nerves carry signals from the brain and spinal cord to the rest of the body.

The nervous system is divided into the central nervous system (CNS) and the peripheral nervous system (PNS). The CNS includes the brain and spinal cord. The PNS includes all the other nerves in the body. The PNS is further divided into the somatic nervous system, which controls voluntary movements, and the autonomic nervous system, which controls involuntary functions like heart rate and digestion.

The brain is the most complex part of the nervous system. It is divided into several regions, including the cerebrum, cerebellum, and brainstem. The cerebrum is the largest part of the brain and is responsible for higher-level functions like thought, memory, and emotion. The cerebellum is located at the back of the brain and is responsible for coordination and balance. The brainstem is located at the base of the brain and is responsible for basic life-sustaining functions like breathing and heart rate.

The spinal cord is a long, thin, tube-like structure that runs from the base of the brain down to the lower back. It is made up of many segments, each of which contains a pair of spinal nerves. The spinal cord is responsible for carrying signals between the brain and the rest of the body. It also has its own reflex arcs, which allow it to respond to stimuli without the need for the brain.

Peripheral nerves are long, thin structures that branch out from the CNS to the rest of the body. They are made up of many individual nerve fibers, each of which carries a specific type of signal. The PNS is responsible for carrying signals from the CNS to the muscles and organs, and from the muscles and organs back to the CNS.
